MILLBURY - The echoes of a father's cry for help can be heard in the coffee shops and on the street corners of this small, quiet town of some 12,000 people. At issue are the methods used by the Middle District Regional Drug Task Force in conducting a search at the home of Henry Morello of 19 Burbank Street and the appropriateness of public statements made by Representative Paul Kollios relative to that search. What may have been lost in all the turmoil, however, is the underlying cause of the debate: the arrest of Henry Morello's 26-year old son, Glen, who, according to police records, was charged with possession of heroin, possession of heroin with intent to distribute and possession of a hypodermic needle.

The four articles o[illegible] all connected to the debate. We encourage our readers to take the time to read each of these lengthy interviews before coming to any conclusions. In order to follow the articles in the sequence in which they were obtained, readers should begin with "A Father's Cry for Help," followed by "Kollios Advocates Compensation For Clean Up Following Searches," then "Police Chief Reacts to Search Comments," and finally, "Drug Task Force Function Defined."

A Father's Cry for Help

By A.G. Belisle and A.A. Belisle

MILLBURY - At approximately 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 4, four members of the Middle District Regional Drug Task Force, empowered by a search warrant, conducted a search of Henry Morello's Burbank Street residence. According to Morello, the search warrant indicated that the officers were searching for heroin which they suspected was in the possession of his son, Glen, who was temporarily living with him.

According to the elder Morello, when members of the task force arrived, "they just came barging right through and into my house." Morello said he asked for identification and one of the officers produced a badge. He was then shown a search warrant. "I read it and I said, 'Wait a minute, now; hold on a second. Show a little respect; you're in my home, and I certainly will pay back the respect.' And I read it and they proceeded to start

Police Chief Responds to Search Comments

Seldom does a day go by when some aspect of the drug syndrome is not heard of or spoken about because, with the increased media attention given to this multi-faceted subject has come an indifference, a nonchalance about it all.

Kollios Advocates Compensation For Clean Up Following Searches

By A.A. Belisle

Following the Middle District Regional Drug Task Force's search of Henry Morello's home on March 4, Morello contacted several local and state officials to voice his displeasure with the way the search was conducted. Representative Paul Kollios was one of those individuals contacted.

Kollios went to the Morello home on Sunday, March 5, to view the site. "They didn't search every room in the house," Kollios said. "I think they felt pretty comfortable that Mr. Morello

Drug Task Force Function Defined

By A.A. Belisle

The Middle District Regional Drug Task Force conducted the search of Henry Morello's home on March 4. Lieutenant Arthur Brodeur is a member of that task force and also a member of the Marlboro Police Department. In a telephone interview, Brodeur agreed to talk about the origination of the task force and how it functions.

"It was basically the idea of Chief Kenneth Hutchins of Northboro," Brodeur explained. "He got some of the other chiefs together to form it because we were running into the same people (suspects) from

Millbury Selectmen's Meeting Digest

Board Receives Update From Solid Waste Advisory Committee

By Edward J. Cooney

MILLBURY - Chairman Jude Cristo called the March 7 meeting to order a little after 7:00 p.m. Minutes for the February 28 meeting were approved on a 4-0 vote, with Selectman Wynton Adams absent. Cristo suspended Administrative Assistant Earle Chase's weekly report as he was not in attendance.

Appointments

Moving to Old Business, Selectman Donald Gauthier noted that there were two requests for appointments to the local Housing Partnership: the Reverend Raeburn Cameron and William Moore.

Two candidates are also interested in serving on the Youth Commission: Linda Johnson and Lincoln Barton.

No appointments were made but were deferred until next week.

Frank Irr, of Church Street, is interested in serving on the Cable T.V. Oversight Committee. He will be asked to attend the next meeting for an interview.

Transfer Station

The board voted 4-0 to approve the voucher for a payment for completion of additional work at the Transfer Station construction site. It was noted that Earle Chase had viewed the site, verified that the work was completed, and recommended that the voucher be approved.

HVAC Project

According to Debbie Plante, secretary to the Board of Selectmen, five sets of specs have been taken out for bids for the Heating and Air Conditioning project for the Town Hall. Bids are to be opened publicly on March 13.

DPW Study Committee

Board member John Donnelly, a representative to the Department of Public Works Study Committee, told the board that Kathy Klein was elected chairwoman of the committee.

Police Business

At 7:15, Police Chief Ron Stokowski gave his weekly report, which consisted of a request for the board's approval to develop a list of people to receive training as special police officers. He told the board that those selected would have to pay a $100 fee for a 16-week training program for which they would be reimbursed upon completion of the training and appointment as special police officers. Stokowski emphasized that they would be an added benefit to the town because of the training they would receive.

The board agreed to support the chief's recommendation on a 4-0 vote.

New Business

A street opening request from Commonwealth Gas at Shore Terrace was approved on a 4-0 vote.

Poll workers for the upcoming annual election were approved on a 4-0 vote.

At 7:29, the business agenda was completed.

Solid Waste Advisory Committee

At 7:30, the board met with Peter Boria, Chairman of the Solid Waste Advisory Committee. Boria gave the board written recommendations for amendments and additions to the by-law on the unlawful dumping of rubbish: a daily fine of $300 and a one time $1,000 fine, based upon state statute limitations on fines.

Boria also reported that his committee was looking throughout the town for land for composting leaves, grass and small branches.

Selectman Roland Lachance asked whether the landfill could be used once it is capped.

Boria said that DEQE would not approve that as the capping will have a liner and heavy equipment or machines could not be run across it.

Lachance suggested that a letter of inquiry be sent to the DEQE requesting a written response on available options to the town for the landfill once the capping has been completed. The aboard agreed that a letter would be helpful if some suggestions were developed through DEQE recommendations.

Boria then explained that, according to the State's Master Plan, 17% of solid waste could be attributed to materials suitable for composting. He also said that there was a possibility of placing a container at the landfill for the waste to be composted, which could be trucked to another location. He said his committee, with the help of Highway Surveyor Joe Chase, is trying to locate a composting site.

Boria invited board members to a meeting with Bill Finn, a consultant who was to meet with the study committee. Finn has met before with the board to consult on solid waste management.

Cristo asked Boria if the committee had begun a discussion on ways to manage solid waste flow. Boria replied that his committee was waiting to see what plans the Board of Health has, noting that his committee stands ready to assist and help.

Correspondence

A letter was received from the Central Mass. Regional Planning Commission, informing the board that Millbury's per capita cost would be $2454.04.

A letter was read from the Planning Board, recommending that the Board of Selectmen not exercise its option to buy two acres of land on Stowe Road, owned by George Stowe, which are protected under Chapter 61A.

A letter was read from Fred Vulter, head of the Millbury Police Association, thanking the board for its

Wheelabrator

A 7:45, a public hearing was held to consider an application from Wheelabrator-Millbury Inc. for storage of diesel fuel and hydraulic fluids above ground at the plant.

Robert Katch, representing Wheelabrator, told the board that his company is seeking permission to store 7,000 gallons total. Cristo noted that the application indicated 5,000 gallons of diesel fuel storage. After inspecting the application, Katch said that it was Wheelabrator's intention to store 7,000 gallons. He also said that Fire Chief Tom Nault had reviewed and approved the location and storage of the fuel.

Cristo told Katch that the board could act only on the application for 5,000 gallons. He suggested that Wheelabrator reapply for an additional 2,000 gallons.

The board did vote, 4-0, to approve the application for the storage of 5,000 gallons above ground, as approved by the Fire Chief.

Dorothy Manor School

At 8:00 p.m., Chet Hanratty, chairman of the School Committee, petitioned the board to reassign the school committee as leasing agent for the Dorothy Manor School on Millbury Avenue. Hanratty told the board that Pakachoag Acres Child Care Centers presently leases a portion of the building and would like to renew the lease for another year.

Hanratty explained that the committee prefers a year lease to allow for use of the building by the school department in the event of an influx of new students.

Hanratty also said that some maintenance and repairs would be made to the building from monies available in the revolving account. Any monies left in the account at the end of this fiscal year would be returned to the town's general fund. According to Hanratty, some of the work relating to small areas of containment of asbestos could be done by trained school personnel during the summer or on weekends.

The board voted 4-0 to approved Hanratty's request.

Chapter 61A Land

At 8:08, the board met with George Stowe, of Stowe Road, who explained that he intends to sell a two acre lot on Stowe Road and lease the remaining acreage as farmland under Chapter 61A. The board unanimously approved a motion by Lachance not to exercise the Town's option to buy the land.

Executive Session

The board went into executive session with Hanratty to discuss issues of collective bargaining pertaining to negotiations with the Millbury Teacher's Union.

Building Inspector's Position

Upon returning to open session, the board met with Town Planner Dave Hulseberg before moving to adjournment.

Hulseberg presented a proposal for the establishment of a full time building inspector's position that could possibly be funded by the state for a three year period, if funding is available.

He explained that there is a possibility of the town receiving a grant if funding is restored, which would pay 75% of the cost the first year, 50% the 2nd year, and 25% the 3rd year, with the town picking up the full cost the 4th year.

The board took no action, asking for more information from Hulseberg on job duties, job description, and a comparative study of other communities relating to job classifications.

Birthday Celebration

MILLBURY - On April 11, 1864, the Town of Millbury voted to accepted 600 volumes from the Society of Social Friends, an organization consisting of teachers and pupils from Millbury Academy (site of the Center School). The purpose of acceptance was to found a free public library which has been in existence for 125 years.

On April 11, 1989, there will be a birthday celebration at 128 Elm Street, beginning at 6:30 p.m. The Trustees and Friends of the Library extend an invitation to all townspeople and interested persons to attend the sign dedication, the opening of the Professional Community Art Show, and a reception.

searching the house for the heroin substance; that's what they were here for; 'heroin' was mentioned in the search warrant."

Morello was told to sit in the kitchen. One officer searched the kitchen while the three other officers searched other rooms in the two story Housing Authority unit. Seated in the kitchen, he observed the search being conducted around him. "It was like a tornado hit the place," Morello said. "I saw what the officer was doing; what he was up to, and he's the one I had told 'Be careful, I can understand what your job is but try not to break things.' But he didn't even answer me. He proceeded to just bang things away and put his hands in my flour, sugar; he touched all my food in the refrigerator, which was utterly ridiculous, with his dirty, filthy hands. What am I going to do, throw that stuff away now?" he asked.

"It was like a tornado hit the place." - Henry Morello

The elder Morello said that his son had told the police he had needles up in his bedroom, which, he said, the police found right away. "Glen told them," Henry Morello said, "he said, 'But you're not going to find anything else because there's nothing else to be found.' He said, 'I'm off heroin.' He said, 'I've already gone through a detox place on Belmont Street.' He was there for the whole period, 30 days," he added.

Morello's outrage over the search was muted periodically during the interview by a deep sense of sadness, frustration, and confusion over the turn his son's life had taken. "I've had many, many talks, from a father and son point of view," he said. "I've been trying to talk him into just leading a different life."

According to Morello, his son had completed a 30 day detoxification program at a facility on Belmont Street in Worcester. Morello said his son returned from the detox center and was doing well. "Then he had a lapse," Morello said, "where he went back with his old friends, and he started drugs again. And he told me, he said, 'Dad, I'm back on drugs again and I don't like it.'"

Morello's son then returned to the clinic and resumed methodone treatments. "As a matter of fact," Morello said, "he was on it right up until yesterday, but yesterday he didn't take whatever he takes. He was at the detox a little over a month ago, and he finished. Then he came out, then he was doing fine, he was doing very, very good. I was very proud of him. He was looking for a job, but he couldn't find a job. And that in itself kind of hurt a little bit. But in the meantime, back meeting with his friends again; I don't know what happened. But he got weak, lost his resistance, went back, and he began to use drugs again. But he wasn't using them for very long because he came right over and told me, he said, 'Dad, I was using drugs again, but I've stopped again now, and I'm back on a detox program again.' So I was proud of him for that."

Morello said he told his son, "Those are not your friends out there if you're getting involved in drugs. You've got to be honest; you've got to be sincere. You've got to get away from that."

Morello said his son assured him that he was going to do all he could to stop his dependency on drugs. "And he's been doing pretty good," Morello said. "And now, all of a sudden, this comes out."

According to Henry Morello, there are many young people in Millbury whose lives are focused on the same destructive path as his son's. "I know a lot of these young fellows," he said. "I know who they are, but I don't know them by name. But they all seem like nice kids. And Glen, have you met Glen?" he asked, his voice carrying a note of pride despite the tragedy surrounding him. "Glen's a good kid. He's well liked. But when you get into the drug habit, they need help."

Henry Morello's voice became agitated as he reverted to memories of the search. "They (drug users) don't need this kind of help. What did they (the police) accomplish by doing this? What did they accomplish by coming in and tearing my house apart?"

Morello was not totally unsympathetic to the efforts of the police. "I can understand that they're fighting the drug problem," he said. "I want them to. I want them to fight drugs because I know what it has done to my son."

What Morello did take exception to was the focus of the fight against drugs. "They've got to stop drugs first of all, number one, from coming into the country. That's where they should concentrate. Then, once it comes into the country, they should go after the people where that drug center is. Then from there, they have to follow it to the distribution center."

Morello, his thoughts returning again to the search, added, "But they're not fighting the drug problem by coming in here and ransacking my house. It's a total catastrophe here."

The elder Morello attempted to explain his perception of his son's problem. "He doesn't need going to jail; he needs help. He's an abuser. He's abused the drug. He's using drugs, but the kid needs help. He needs a job."

Morello compared his son's problem to that of an alcoholic or a habitual smoker. "Glen hasn't done anything wrong," he said. "He's not any worse than someone going into a bar and getting drunk, plastered. Or someone that smokes 4 or 5 packs of cigarettes a day. These people you consider a habitual smoker, the other one is an alcoholic."

Morello questioned the availability of drugs programs in the area. "What kind of a drug program do they have here in Worcester?" he asked. "I know in Boston they even have a unit that goes around trying to help the drug addicts. Glen is not a criminal. Glen, unfortunately, got started. How he got started I'll never know, but he did. He got started in drugs, then the poor kid just couldn't break the habit. But now he realizes. With great sincerity, with great honesty and trust, he's saying, 'Dad, I've got to start a new life.' He knows what he has to do. How is he going to do what he wants to do, what he was planning on doing, when we run into a situation like this? There's a missing link."

According to Morello, the missing link is a lack of available programs to assist those with a dependency on drugs. "I know there's a lot of young men in Millbury that need help," he said. "Why they're not getting the help that they really deserve to get, I will never know. That, to me, is the missing link. There are a lot of nice, young men here in Millbury. A lot of them. And a lot of them show respect because I see them every day. And many of them that know me, right off the bat, they welcome me. They say, 'Hi, Mr. Morello.' To me, that shows respect. To me that means that these kids have got something on the ball when they respect their elders."

Morello then voiced thoughts undoubtedly shared by other parents whose children have become involved with drugs. "There is something wrong when they continue to abuse themselves by using drugs. Why? Why are these things happening right here in this small town of approximately 11,000 people here in Millbury. We've got all these young men, nice looking boys, healthy boys, that are almost destroying their health being on drugs. Now why, why isn't there a place where these kids can go to see if they can kick the habit and get back to a normal life like they deserve to live and, I'm sure, a lot of them would like to. It seems to me as though a lot of them are just caught, like Glen."

"They (drug users) don't need this kind of help. What did they (the police) accomplish by doing this? What did they accomplish by coming in and tearing my house apart?" - Henry Morello Repeating his belief that more help should be available for drug abusers, Morello referred to the recent earthquake in Armenia and the subsequent rally for assistance by the people of Massachusetts. "All of a sudden people are out there spending money, sending doctors, helping people; people helping people. That's what this world is all about," he said. "That's why we're living. That's what our government and that's what our country is all about.

"How come we're not helping these young fellows out there that need help?" Morello asked. "We're not helping them when they come in and do what they did to my house. No way, no way."

probably wasn't involved so they left his room untouched. But they did the kitchen, and the basement and the son's room with a complete search. From the way it looks, everything is dumped, all drawers, bed stripped, things are just tossed and strewn around the room so that in order to walk into the young man's room (the room where Morello's 26 year old son was temporarily living) you have to walk on the clothes and the material from the closets and the bureaus."

Kollios, who said this was the first time he had ever viewed a home following a search, acknowledged that he was unfamiliar with the procedures involved. "The conduct of the search, I'm not familiar with, what training is involved in how they do that, what they look for. I know there's a system to it," he said. "Policemen, if there are several at one time, they all take their turns to go through the same material so they don't overlook something. Especially when you're looking for things like narcotics, you've got to be very thorough and I understand that. And I know that you have to look through every nook and cranny."

A March 7 story in The Evening Gazette on the search of the Morello home said that the search has Kollios "worried that police may have overstepped standard procedures for executing a search warrant." When asked if that statement was intended as a criticism of the police department, Kollios replied, "It's not meant as a criticism of our task force, which seems to be operating pretty well, except that I want to discuss with the Selectmen the origination of that and the management of that and to whom these various towns are accountable and how it operates."

Kollios continued, "I'm not critical of police activity, I'm certainly not critical of the drug task force activity because it's working pretty well, both the one in Millbury and the one down in Oxford. Towns have to collaborate in order to take on a problem like drug abuse. It's so prevalent and it crosses lines. It's international in scope but among our own local levels we have to have cooperation among the contiguous towns and cities. So a task force like this I strongly endorse."

Kollios also said he thinks the town has to be concerned about liability. "If there's an incident that results, unforseen, whereby the community can be sued, who is liable in the case of a task force when the task force is made up of a collaborative of several towns. I want to know who is liable and to whom are the officers in the task force accountable. That's just general discussion and I think it's for the selectmen to understand that there should be a hold on that." Kollios was scheduled to meet with the Board of Selectmen on March 14 to discuss this issue.

While one of Kollios' concerns has to do with the "accountability component," the other, he said, "is generally with police in one town, or the task force, what are they going to do with respect to searches when they leave the property in the condition that we have at Mr. Morello's?"

According to Kollios, "My problem is with the way property might be left, especially when you're talking about someone not connected with the crime and it's his property. The thing that's most prevalent on my mind is the condition in which a house or apartment can be left after a search and that the people be compensated." Kollios said he was "concerned about the government doing something to compensate for damage or cleanup costs."

Kollios spoke with Police Chief Ron Stokowski about the March 4 search. When asked if his discussions with the chief had occasioned any change of opinion, Kollios said, "No. The Chief, of course, wanted to try to impress upon me that the young man was involved in a crime. He couldn't relate to me what they in fact found, but he mentioned that if there is something found, then the man is a criminal. I said that didn't matter to me, that wasn't the point. I don't care if they found machine guns and bombs and narcotics. I'm still concerned about the property and the way it was left. And it was Mr. Morello's property, not his son's."

When asked if he felt the police should be responsible for cleaning up a home following a search, Kollios replied, "No. I think we should make provisions for it to be cleaned up somehow or other."

When asked, "Cleaned up by whom?", Kollios said, "The government who did it. If a person commits a crime, it doesn't mean that we, the police on the scene, can penalize by damaging the property. That would be taking the law in their own hands and meeting out a punishment. The punishment in this case being damage to the property. "

When asked what he meant by "damage," Kollios replied, "Well, it costs money to clean it up. I've already, since this incident has occurred, heard from other people where similar things have happened. In one case, it cost the resident $600 to clean up the property. They had to have their rubbish man come and remove everything. And then there was the charge of the cost of repairing the doors because the tenant wasn't there at the time."

With respect to compensation, Kollios said, "I'm wondering if perhaps we might address that (compensation) by way of a fund such as we have in the state budget called a Victim-Witness Compensation Fund."

The interview was cut short by a roll call vote in the House.

"I don't care if they found machine guns and bombs and narcotics. I'm still concerned about the property and the way it was left. And it was Mr. Morello's property, not his son's." - Rep. Paul Kollios such as the search of Henry Morello's residence on March 4 to drive home certain painful realities, namely that the international problem of drug related crimes has not escaped the Town of Millbury.

The search of Henry Morello's home was covered in an Evening Gazette article which said, "A police search of a local man's home Saturday has state Rep. Paul Kollios worried that police may have overstepped standard procedures for executing a search warrant." This statement has been interpreted by Millbury's Provisional Police Chief, Ron Stokowski, as a criticism of police procedures.

Stokowski, who was present at the Burbank Street site while most of the search took place, agreed to an interview, explaining that he could not reveal the particulars of this case since it has not yet come to trial. He did say that Henry Morello's son was arrested and charged with possession of heroin, possession of heroin with intent to distribute and possession of a hypodermic needle.

According to Stokowski, "there was nothing unique about the search. Other searches have been conducted in the area with similar results," he said. He was cautious about detailing all of the procedures used in a search for fear of alerting the drug culture to the variety of techniques employed. He did note, however, that drug traffickers and users are very inventive about disguising their caches.

Stokowski explained that a search warrant is not obtained without a great deal of evidence to support the warrant. "The whole process starts with police gathering evidence," he said. "Sometimes this comes from an informant; sometimes its hearsay; sometimes from surveillance - seeing known drug offenders walking in and out of a place - then we build on that." The police take the information they've gathered, adding to it, until ultimately jurisdiction to jurisdiction and we really couldn't follow it up. It was more to stretch the jurisdiction."

Brodeur illustrated, "If a police officer from Millbury is working in Millbury and he gets a guy, a distributor who's from a different town, he would have to end his investigation. The most he could do is turn it over to somebody else and hope that they would follow it. This way here, he can follow his own investigation."

The task force, established by Northboro Police Chief Kenneth Hutchins in October of 1984, was originally comprised of five towns: Marlboro, Northboro, Westboro, Shrewsbury and Grafton. Millbury joined in June of 1988.

When the task force was formed, Brodeur said that all the chiefs met and all the rules and procedures were established. "We don't decide on our own that we're going to go take another town," he said. "All the chief's have to be notified and mutual aid agreements made up. The mutual aid agreements have to be voted on by each town's administration."

The program is funded in part by a $68,000 grant and monies allotted from seizures. "We accumulated, prior to June, about $200,000 in seizures that we did ourselves with the original task force," Brodeur explained. "That's money that was forfeited through the courts and we received our portion. Also with joint investigations with the federal authorities."

Brodeur said that in order to become a member of the task force, the chief of police of the town seeking the request has to go through Chief Hutchins. "Basically, what we do is talk it over to see if there are some ties in that town with the towns that we've already got in it. And if it seems like the feasibility would be to assist each other in the investigations, then the town comes in," he said.

Brodeur explained that the officers are sent to different training schools for drug investigation. He also said that the task force is ultimately accountable to Chief Hutchins, in coordination with all the chiefs from all the towns in the task force.

"We're a collective group of police officers from different towns, acting under the authority of that particular town that we are in on that particular incident." - Lt. Arthur Brodeur, member of the Middle District Regional Task Force

According to Brodeur, the goal of the task force is to target known drug dealers and to go after those targets. "Of course," he said, "new targets keep cropping up to the point where city and town lines don't really mean anything. If they move outside of that we have to contact other agencies whether it be state police or drug enforcement for other towns or other task forces."

Brodeur was asked to define the line of authority when a search takes place. "It depends on the investigation," Brodeur replied. "If it's our investigation, we're all sworn in in each other's town under a mutual aid agreement. We have the police powers of each of our towns that we represent. It would depend on each situation. The Chief (Ron Stokowski) was there (at the Morello home) that night so he would be in charge at that point. We're not going to supercede any chief's powers by any means. We're a collective group of police officers from different towns, acting under the authority of that particular town that we are in on that particular incident."

According to Brodeur, the search conducted at the Morello home was one of three that have taken place in Millbury so far this year. The task force conducted a total of 47 searches in 1988, not counting "consent" and motor vehicle searches during the course of a regular investigation. As of March 11, 1989, 21 have been conducted. Brodeur explained that the task force has picked up another five towns which may account for part of the increase.

"You're still getting some of the kids dealing, but you're getting a lot of the 20 year olds, 30 year olds, 40 year olds, a lot of them professional people. It's not a kid's occupation anymore like it used to be in the old days." - Lt. Brodeur

In addition to discussing the functions and scope of the task force, Brodeur agreed to talk about the hazards involved in a search. "First of all," he said, "when you search a room, generally say for a heroin search warrant, a package of heroin is about the size of a postage stamp. So you've got to look through everything. While doing that, especially on a heroin search warrant, you're going to probably encounter needles and syringes which may or may not be infected with any contagious disease. You can wear rubber gloves, but if you hit a needle it's going to stick right through you. There has been some intelligence as far as some of the people leaving needles around on purpose in locations where you're going to hit them with your fingers. Some of the places where you find needles, naturally they're going to try to hide them to the point where you're not going to find them so you have to go through everything to find them."

Brodeur talked about a recent case. "Just four or five days ago in Marlboro," he said, "we had to rip up the floorboards and in fact we found 41 bags of cocaine under the floorboards, under another floor. When you talk about a search and people complaining about the way something was searched, I'm sure we've missed a lot of stuff because we haven't ripped up floorboards and stuff. Under the law, under court decisions, we're entitled to search any place where that item may be found, and you're talking a postage stamp item. You can imagine the possibilities."

Brodeur also said that investigators often find small packages of heroin or cocaine hidden in the trash. Recalling a December incident he explained, "A lot of times we find it in the trash, in the garbage, especially the remains of bags with residues, which shows proof of intent to distribute. A lot of times were going through people's garbage. Just back in December, we searched a place and, after about two hours of searching, the people were laughing and joking. Come to find out, they had scabies. So all of us at three o'clock in the morning had to go to the hospital, get medication, prescriptions and worry about bringing it home to our families. You had to get this lotion, put it all over your body, spray, do your hair with special shampoo, burn your clothes or throw them away." Two members of the task force did eventually come down with the disease.

Brodeur explained that there is no limit to the number of places where drugs may be hidden. "It's just endless where the stuff could be hidden," he said. "so you've got to use some common sense as far as how far we search certain areas of a house. But again, if you've got a house where you've got a suspect that may be dealing heroin or cocaine and he happens to live in his parents house, it's not uncommon at all to find some of the stash hidden in either the kid's rooms or the parent's rooms, unknowingly by the parents and also by the kids. Many times we find drugs in diaper bags in the kid's rooms; little babies rooms. Just because we suspect one person of dealing, if he's got access to any part of that house he's got access to hide it in. By the same token, a kid who's a suspect, we're going to be a lot more careful in the parent's room, but we still have to search."

"...I don't consider the people that we are searching, unless they're innocent, to be a victim by any means. I consider the people that they're dealing to, the kids and so forth, to be the victims." - Lt. Brodeur

Brodeur was asked which drug is most prevalent in this area. Without hesitation, he replied, "Cocaine." "There are not that many heroin users," he said, "the population stays fairly stable. It doesn't have great big upturns like cocaine or like marijuana used to be. Cocaine, when that came in, it just mushroomed. It was that way when grass first came in, although we're starting to see a little bit more marijuana than we did a while ago, a little resurgence. But cocaine is still the drug of choice at this point."

Brodeur also said that the dealing population is getting older. "You're still getting some of the kids dealing, but you're getting a lot of the 20 year olds, 30 year olds, 40 year olds, a lot of them professional people," he said. "It's not a kid's occupation anymore like it used to be in the old days."

Brodeur was asked to comment on Rep. Paul Kollios' statement that he would like to see the government set up some kind of funding to pay for cleanup costs after a home has been searched.

"My only comment to that," Brodeur said, " is, first of all, we have to do our job. Nothing intentionally gets destroyed. Most of the time it's a matter of that person having to clean his place up. On many search warrants that we go on, that place is usually cleaner when we leave than when we went in. Some of the places we go into are disaster areas before we arrive. That's the way some of these people live. As far as cleaning up afterwards, I don't consider the people that we are searching, unless they're innocent, to be a victim by any means. I consider the people that they're dealing to, the kids and so forth, to be the victims. And too bad for them if they have to clean up their rooms.

"As far as ripping a floor up," he continued, "if there are drugs in the floor and we rip the floor up, I'm certainly not going to pay for that floor. Just because the guy has got to clean up after himself, the person should have thought of that before the person decided to sell drugs and in some instances use drugs."

Brodeur concluded, "If there wasn't enough reason to go in a house, we wouldn't be in there in the first place."

"If there wasn't enough reason to go in a house, we wouldn't be in there in the first place." - Lt. Brodeur

Girl Scout Council Dedicates New Center

WORCESTER - The Montachusett Girl Scout Council dedicated its new Girl Scout Center at 79 and 81 Gold Star Boulevard during an Open House held recently. Civic and community officials from a number of surrounding communities attended the event.

The new center includes a renovated Administrative Center and a newly acquired building which has been designed as a Service Center. Its location near the junction of two interstate highways and several state highways makes it ideally suited to serve the council's 61 communities from Connecticut to New Hampshire and from Quabbin Reservoir to Route 495.

The center features a Girl Scout Equipment Store and meeting and conference facilities. A Girl Scout museum is presently under development. For the convenience of parents and volunteers, the store will carry the majority of items found in the Girl Scout Equipment Catalog. Complete uniforms for Daisy, Brownie, Junior, Cadette and Senior Girl Scouts may be purchased as well as uniform accessories, pins and badges. Camping gear, recognition items and Girl Scout jewelry will also be available.

According to Betty A. Stephenson, Executive Director, "We are very excited about the opening of this new Girl Scout Center. It will greatly increase our ability to serve the nearly 8,000 girls and the over 2,000 adult volunteers in Girl Scouting in the 61 communities in central Massachusetts that make up our council."

The Montachusett Council is an agency of the United Way.

It is a reproduction of a medieval French castle. During the course of his lifetime, Hammond furnished the building with historical artifacts and antiques. The students were accompanied by David Muradian and William Brosnihan.

STOKOWSKI

they have built a case for "probable cause."

When sufficient data has been collected, a search warrant is filled out. The warrant includes an affidavit stating the purpose of the search and the evidence upon which the request is based. The next step involves going before a judge or a clerk magistrate. "He reviews the evidence and the affidavit and decides if there is probable cause for issuing a (search) warrant," Stokowski said.

into your home and go through your bureau drawers because you couldn't hide a 21" TV in a bureau. However, if my information was that you had a stolen 21" TV and you were going to dismantle it and sell the parts, then I could search anywhere it would be reasonable to assume that parts could be hidden. It's the same principle used in a heroin search," he emphasized, "because we're looking for something so small. What's to prevent you from hiding it anywhere? It's been found in phony containers, in the refrigerator, and in things in the refrigerator."

With respect to the Morello search, he stated emphatically, "By what I saw, they (the Regional Drug Task Force) acted very professionally."

"If I know an individual is in possession of a kilo of heroin and search the premises and don't find it but know it's in the house, I can tear down the ceiling, tear up the floor, tear open the walls until I find it. And I don't have to have a carpenter following me to put things back." - Chief Stokowski

Once the police enter a dwelling with a search warrant, they are in control of the premises and require that all members of the household remain in view of a police officer. "We don't want to place ourselves in any more jeopardy than we have to," Stokowski said. "I want to sit them (suspects) down and watch them." Stokowski explained that it would be very easy for a suspect to quickly destroy evidence or to reach into a drawer and pull out a handgun.

The police then systematically search the premises. Because many drugs are stored and sold in paper thin packages as small as a postage stamp, they can be concealed anywhere. "We've found heroin stuffed in flour and sugar, in mustard, in vegetables, in the refrigerator, in light sockets and light switches - almost anywhere," Stokowski said.

Stokowski explained that "reasonableness" is the key to a police search. "If I have evidence that you stole a 21" TV," he said, "I couldn't go Stokowski also brought up the hazards faced by the police in conducting a search. "What if an officer was to prick himself with a needle that was contaminated with hepatitis or AIDs? What if the stash was booby trapped?" he asked.

Stokowski took particular issue with a statement in the Gazette article that quoted Kollios as saying, "If what (police) are taught about searches in the training academy is what I saw (Sunday), then we've got to go back to the academy for a new procedure."

"Officers have to check everywhere for heroin," Stokowski explained. "To do that you clean an area in the center of the room and start checking everything, putting what's been cleared in a pile in the clean zone. No, you don't place things, and no, you don't clean up."

He offered another analogy. "If I know an individual is in possession of a kilo of heroin and search the premises and don't find it but know it's in the house, I can tear down the ceiling, tear up the floor, tear open the walls until I find it. And I don't have to have a carpenter following me to put things back," he said.

Stokowski said that he explained the circumstances and what took place to Kollios as a courtesy to him as a legislator. He also said that Kollios' comments cast unfair reflections on methods and procedures which are proven, professional and reasonable given the nature of the drug problem. "When dealing with a controlled substance that has little bulk, this is the only way you can proceed. I explained that to (Rep.) Kollios and to (Henry) Morello," he said.

Stokowski did not dispute the fact that the house was left in disarray. "Yes, his (Morello's) house was a mess, but there was no physical damage done. It wasn't like a house that a junkie broke into and trashed; nothing was stolen and destroyed. When a junkie breaks into a house to steal something for a fix, he'll take anything he can sell. He'll take an heirloom that is irreplaceable and sell it for a dollar - anything for a fix."

Stokowski believes Kollios should be more concerned with the innocent victims whose homes are violated by the same individuals the task force seeks to search out with a warrant. "What happens to that victim who has had absolutely no connection with drugs? he asked. "Do people come forward and say 'That's too bad; let's pay for his clean-up; let's pay for his damages?'

"In a search like the one at the Morello's house," Stokowski continued, "most of the time it's a matter of having to clean up, not replace." He again noted that searches are not conducted without "probable cause." "It's not just picking a house and walking in to trash it," he said.

"It's hard enough for the police to live with all of the legal restrictions that we have without taking a bad rap from a representative that was given the courtesy of an explanation." - Chief Stokowski

Calling drugs a "curse and a plague," Stokowski said, "I want Millbury residents to know that this department and the Middle District Regional Drug Task Force will continue to take whatever measures are legally available to us to protect the people of this town from drug pushers and users, despite what appears to be an attempt by some people to pamper them. It's hard enough for the police to live with all of the legal restrictions that we have without taking a bad rap from a representative who was given the courtesy of an explanation," he said.

Stokowski suggested that anyone interested in learning all the facts about the Morello case should attend the hearing, which is scheduled for May 5th.

Massachusetts Audubon to Host Recycling Conference

WORCESTER - In response to public concern over the commonwealth's mounting solid waste burden and the outcry for recycling, Massachusetts Audubon: Worcester will be hosting "Gold from Garbage: A Citizen's Forum on Recycling" on Saturday, April 8, at Hogan Center, Holy Cross College. The conference will run from 8:45 a.m. through lunch and will feature speakers and workshops dealing with topics ranging from the state's role in recycling to establishing a community program.

"Recycling is coming into its own as a workable solution to one of the most pressing problems of our day," according to Charles Dufault, recycling project coordinator at Massachusetts Audubon: Worcester. This forum is meant to help private citizens and municipal officials learn the ins and outs of the recycling process in the hopes that they can tailor a program to fit their own communities.

While some towns boast that they have achieved a 50% reduction in their solid waste stream since they initiated recycling, Massachusetts Audubon Society researchers feel that a 30% cut back is within reach of every community.

Currently, 129 Bay State communities are recycling. Of these, 54 have made it mandatory. "It (recycling) is not the total solution to our solid waste crisis but it is an essential part of the picture," Dufault said. "It is believed that recycling coupled with source reduction will greatly decrease the need for more hazardous incineration and landfilling. Source reduction is simply the use of more efficient, less bulky packaging."

For registration information about the conference, call 755-8899 or write to Massachusetts Audubon: Worcester, 500 Main Street, Worcester, MA 01608.

St. Patrick's Day Party

The co-chairmen of this event are Bob Weidman and Wille Brodeur. Proceeds from this event will be donated to a variety of charitable organizations.

Rabies Clinic

MILLBURY - The Millbury Board of Health and the Animal Inspector will hold a Rabies Clinic for dogs and cats on Saturday, April 22, at the Elm Street Fire Station. Dogs will be taken from 11:00 a.m. to noon; cats from noon to 12:30 p.m. The cost for each will be $5.00.

Do not bring your dog and cat at the same time; they will be inoculated only during the above stated times. Animals must be restrained at all times.

Houston and Kollios Recognized for Work with Disabled

BOSTON - The Massachusetts Developmental Disabilities Council and the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens recently presented Senator John P. Houston (D-Worcester) and Representative Paul Kollios (D-Millbury) with an award recognizing their efforts on behalf of people with developmental disabilities. Houston and Kollios are the Senate Chairman and House Chairman respectively of the Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee.

In accepting the award, both Houston and Kollios praised the efforts of the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens and the Massachusetts Developmental Disabilities Council for their untiring efforts throughout the year. "Without the organizing and lobbying work of these citizens," Houston said, "we in the legislature could not advocate effectively on behalf of people with developmental disabilities."

Marble Announces Candidacy for School Committee

MILLBURY - Alan K. Marble, 41, of 84 Elmwood Street, has announced his candidacy for a three year term on the Millbury School Committee.

Marble currently serves as Chairman of the Millbury Finance Committee and previously served as Clerk on the same committee.

He is a member of the Executive Board and Search and Study Committee of the First Congregational Church in Millbury. He also coaches for the Millbury Youth Soccer League and the YMCA Y-Winners Youth Basketball League. In addition, he is a member of the Singletary Rod and Gun Club.

Marble has been employed as a Science teacher in the Framingham Public School System for 19 years, and serves on a town-wide curriculum development committee in Framingham. He was awarded Horace Mann grants twice in the last three years.

Marble is a lifelong resident of Millbury and a graduate of Millbury Public Schools. He earned B.S.ed and M.S.ed degrees from Worcester State College. He and his wife, the former Kathleen Flynn, have two children attending Millbury public schools: Charles, 13, and Andrew, 8.

In announcing his candidacy, Marble said, "As an experienced teacher, I have first-hand experience and knowledge of the problems and challenges facing the schools of today. I recognize the value of basic skills and discipline in the schools. I fully support curriculum coordination from grades K-12. I believe in maintaining high levels of expectation for the average student. I support programs for Special Needs students as well as programs for the gifted and talented student. I recognize the value of intramural, JV and varsity sports. My Finance Committee experience will be of value in promoting fiscal responsibility in the School Department Budget without sacrificing the elements needed for a sound education for the students of Millbury."

Lenten Performance

GRAFTON - The Messengers, a gospel singing group, will perform at the Union Congregational Church in South Grafton on Sunday, March 19 at 7 p.m. The church is located at 88 Main Street, opposite Ferry Street. The public is invited to enjoy this special evening.

The group will perform at the concluding service of the church's special Lenten program which will be led by the Advisory Board under the leadership of Pastor Ed Marston.

The Messengers are well known for their special blend of gospel songs both old and new which are performed at many churches and organizations throughout the Blackstone Valley.

Birthday Celebration

MILLBURY - On April 11, 1864, the Town of Millbury voted to accepted 600 volumes from the Society of Social Friends, an organization consisting of teachers and pupils from Millbury Academy (site of the Center School). The purpose of acceptance was to found a free public library which has been in existence for 125 years.

On April 11, 1989, there will be a birthday celebration at 128 Elm Street, beginning at 6:30 p.m. The Trustees and Friends of the Library extend an invitation to all townspeople and interested persons to attend the sign dedication, the opening of the Professional Community Art Show, and a reception.

Sutton Kindergarten Registration and Screening

Kollios Seeks new Braintree Site for Drunk Driving Offenders

BOSTON - Representative Paul Kollios (D-Millbury) has filed legislation which would direct the Executive Office of Human Services to establish a Driving Under the Influence (DUI) facility at the site of the former Pioneer Valley Academy in New Braintree.

According to Kollios, "By quickly converting the New Braintree site into a facility designed for drunken driving offenders, we could free up a significantly large number of beds in county facilities for more dangerous criminals and help meet the crisis of overcrowding in the correction system."

Drunk drivers currently account for 25% to 30% of all commitments to county jails. The Executive Office of Human Services (EOHS) reports it would take 4-5 years and over $45 million to convert New Braintree to a 500-bed medium security prison. "It would be much easier and less expensive to convert the school to a DUI treatment facility rather than a medium-security prison," Kollios maintains.

The legislation would also more generally direct EOHS to develop sufficient other DUI beds to alleviate overcrowding in the county correctional facilities, with each facility having education and treatment components as required by present DUI laws.

Sutton Woman Promoted to Professor

PAXTON - Dr. Lorraine Popowicz has been promoted to Professor of Biological Sciences at Anna Maria College, according to Sister Bernadette Madore, President.

Popowicz has been an associate professor for the college since 1976. In addition, she has served as Chairwoman of the Graduate Biology Program since 1978 and acted as Chairwoman of the Undergraduate Biology Department for the 1978-79 academic year.

Popowicz said her new promotion to professor is something she has strived for since first coming to Anna Maria College 14 years ago. "It is with a hint of pride and satisfaction that I accept the rank of Professor of Biological Sciences at Anna Maria College," Popowicz said.

Popowicz also said that as she looks back at her years of teaching and advising she notes that the college has changed. "I hope that both of us, in some small way, have brought out the best in the other," she said.

She is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of Microbiologists, the National Science Teachers Association, and the National Association for Research in Science.

Popowicz, who lives in Sutton, holds a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Holy Family College in Philadelphia, a Master of Education Degree from Worcester State College, and a Ph.D. from Boston College.

Teen Art Show

MILLBURY - The Millbury Public Library and the Friends of the Millbury Public Library will host their third annual Teen Art Show for teens age 13 and up. The show opens on March 22 and runs until April 1. A reception will be hosted by the Friends on Wednesday, March 22, between 6:00 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Paintings in all media will be accepted, excluding graphic art. All work must be framed for hanging and must be no larger than 40"x40". Work must include the artist's name, address, and phone number on the reverse side. Only one piece per person will be accepted.

This will be a juried art show. Artists receiving first, second and third place in this show will be awarded rock record albums.

Submissions can be dropped off at the Millbury Public Library, 128 Elm Street, from March 7 through March 18. Work can be picked up at the library after April 4.

Please note: due to limited space, all submissions may not be included in this exhibit.

Funds for this art show are made available through a grant from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery with the help of the Millbury Arts Council. This event is sponsored by the Friends of the Millbury Public Library, and is part of the Library's 125th birthday celebration.

For more information about this and other upcoming art shows and special events, call 865-1181.

Computer Connection

MILLBURY - The Millbury School Connection has planned an exciting evening for those who are interested in learning about computers. The event is scheduled for Wednesday, March 29, at 7:00 p.m. in the Shaw Middle School Media Center.

First there will be a basic introduction to microcomputers by Thomas Mongeon. Mr. Mongeon will spend some time discussing the pros and cons of purchasing your own hardware and software. Also, he will share information about the specific computer curriculum taught in Millbury schools.

The next step is into the computer room where Edna Kotomski and Barbara McCurdy will be on hand with students to demonstrate programs available to children in school.

If you wondered what kids are being taught about computers or are considering a computer system of your own, this is a great opportunity to ask questions and get some hands-on experience.

Join us for a fun and informative evening.

Campaign Liberty '89

MILLBURY - Through the efforts of Ms. Connie Rossi, Reading teacher at Millbury High School, students and faculty have launched a two week campaign entitled, "Liberty '89." The purpose is to refocus attention on the plight of the nine American hostages that remain in captivity somewhere in Lebanon. The ultimate goal is to not only remember them but to take an active role, albeit a small one, to try and get our hostages freed. A former student of Ms. Rossi, Bonnie Anderson, a Miami, Florida journalist-commentator and a close colleague of Terry Anderson, the longest held of the present American hostages, has returned our attention to the disgrace of the unlawful acts of terrorism against our country and our people.

At the high school, Mr. Roger Desrosiers and his Global Issues class will prepare and read a short biography on each of the hostages. This will be read each morning during homeroom period. Mr. Fred Wadsworth and the English Department will oversee a letter writing campaign. The Global issues students will go to each of the English classes on Friday, March 17 to present information and answer students' questions. The letters will be addressed to President Bush, asking him to place a high priority on the release of these Americans.

Each day during these two weeks, around the noon hour, students will tie a yellow ribbon and a yellow balloon to a tree in front of the school as a symbolic reminder of their ordeal. Unfortunately, we need to be reminded. I recall not long ago, merely 8 to 10 years ago, how seriously the American people reacted to the Iranian hostages held in Teheran. Those hostages were held 444 days. Today, because it has been so long, we forget. March 16, 1989 will mark the 4th anniversary of Terry Anderson's kidnapping. Imagine, that's 1,461 days! We cannot let these Americans be forgotten.

Helping to get this message across are Mr. Gerald Boudreau and the Graphic Arts Department who have designed a letterhead for the occasion, Ms. Gail Fairbanks and the Art Department, who have designed computerized posters for each one of the hostages, and Mr. Rocco Bruno and band members who will musically salute these unsung heroes on March 16. Among the students who have extended themselves are Bob Ayotte, Adam Griffith, Tammy Hoel, Jody Pye, Ryan Roach, Bill Tuttle, Michael Tift, Jim Wackell, Andy Wrobel, Tony Enos, and Jim Imbody.

Millbury residents are encouraged to join in this effort by writing letters of concern. Especially designed stationery is available in the high school office. We teach participation; let's do it!
